The Giant King (found under: WATCH; YOUTH: Special Topics)

Some say that Rabbie, the carpenter's son, is a dreamer; but Rabbie says he works from his heart, carving not what is, but what could be. When Rabbie goes to a distant town to sell his carvings, he finds the town besieged by a fierce and destructive giant. The townspeople despair, but Rabbie suggests that if the giant were treated like a king, he might behave like one. The message of this heart-warming fable is charming: that which is loved will reveal its loveliness.

The Giant King is an ideal choice for children in kindergarten through 4th grade. Its underlying themes of belonging, kindness, and peacemaking can be tied into many aspects of a school's curriculum: social studies, reading, writing, art, research activities, and drama. The associated Educators' Guide helps parents and teachers choose one or several areas to focus on depending on the child's grade level and interest.

He has great tranquility of heart who cares neither for the praises nor the fault-finding of men. He will easily be content and pacified, whose conscience is pure. You are not holier if you are praised, nor the more worthless if you are found fault with. What you are, that you are; neither by word can you be made greater than what you are in the sight of God. ~ Thomas à Kempis

"Behold this Heart which has so loved men that it has spared nothing, even to exhausting and consuming itself, in order to testify its love. In return, I receive from the greater part only ingratitude, by their irreverence and sacrileges, and by the coldness and contempt they have for me in this sacrament of love.... I come into the heart I have given you in order that through your fervor you may atone for the offenses which I have received from lukewarm and slothful hearts that dishonor me in the Blessed Sacrament." ~ Our Lord, to St Margaret Mary Alacoque

October 16th: Feast of Saint Hedwig

I could not miss an encounter with Queen St Hedwig's black Crucifix. "There is suffering in the Cross, there is salvation in the Cross, love is learned in the Cross. Those who once succeed in understanding you, O God, desire nothing and seek nothing". This crucifix has deep roots in the religious tradition of Kraków. One can say that Kraków's spirituality was formed by the Cross. Its mystery of the infinite love of God who gives himself without reservation for man's salvation, is a strong exhortation to "Do what you see!". It is impossible to give any other response than to follow Christ on the way of the Cross — on the way of the love of God and neighbour which knows no bounds. Therefore, today I would like to recall once again what I said on that memorable day in Blonia Krakowska: "Divine Providence is putting a new task before us: to love and to serve. To love in deed and in truth. Queen St Hedwig teaches us that the fulfilment of freedom is love, thanks to which man is willing to entrust himself to God and his brothers and sisters, to belong to them she gave the whole nation the example of love of Christ and of man, of man who is hungry for faith and knowledge, as he is also for daily bread and clothing". ~ St. John Paul II

October 17th: St. Ignatius of Antioch

St. Ignatius of Antioch (?-107 AD), called Theophorus (God-bearer), the third bishop of Antioch (after St. Peter and Evodius), was brought to Rome in 107 AD under Emperor Trajan (98-117) and exposed to the wild beasts. On the way to Rome he wrote seven letters to the Christians of Ephesus, Magnesia, Tralles, Rome, Smyrna, Philadelphia, and to Polycarp, bishop of Smyrna. The authenticity of the seven letters is guaranteed by Polycarp and Eusebius, who give the content and order of the letters.

"The last times are come upon us. Let us therefore be of a reverent spirit, and fear the long-suffering of God, that it tend not to our condemnation. For let us either stand in awe of the wrath to come, or show regard for the grace which is at present displayed—one of two things. Only [in one way or another] let us be found in Christ Jesus unto the true life. Apart from Him, let nothing attract[16] you, for whom I bear about these bonds, these spiritual jewels, by which may I arise through your prayers, of which I entreat I may always be a partaker, that I may be found in the lot of the Christians of Ephesus, who have always been of the same mind with the apostles through the power of Jesus Christ." ~ Saint Ignatius of Antioch

October 18th: Feast of St. Isaac Jogues & St. John Brebeuf

On 3 August 1642, Isaac Jogues, Guillaume Couture, René Goupil, and a group of Christian Hurons were heading back from Trois-Rivières to Quebec City when they were waylaid by a war party of the Mohawk Nation. St. Isaac hid, but decided to leave his hiding place to join the prisoners so that he could comfort them and ensure that their faith remained strong. Shortly thereafter, in retaliation for comforting a tortured Frenchman, the Mohawk beat Jogues, tore out his fingernails, then gnawed the ends of his fingers until finger bones were visible. The war party then took their captives on a treacherous journey to a Mohawk village, during which worms began to fester in St. Isaac's wounds. There, the villagers turned out en masse and tortured the prisoners. A captive Algonquin woman cut off St. Isaac's thumb. He was hung from a wooden plank made of intersecting pieces of wood, and nearly lost consciousness, until an Iroquois had pity on him and cut him free. Throughout his captivity, he comforted, baptized, heard confession from, and absolved the other prisoners. Instead of being put to death or integrated into a Mohawk family, he remained a captive at large. A party of Dutch traders ransomed him and gave him money to return to France. Pope Urban VIII considered him a "living martyr," and gave him dispensation to say Mass with his mutilated hand. Under Church law of the time, the Blessed Sacrament could not be touched with any fingers but the thumb and forefinger. In the spring of 1646, St. Isaac returned to Iroquois territory, along with Jean de Lalande, to act as the French ambassador to the Mohawk. St. Isaac and Lalande were met with hesitation upon their arrival, as some Mohawk regarded missionaries as evil practitioners of foreign magic. On 18 October 1646, the Iroquois killed Jogues; they killed LaLande the next day. They threw the bodies into the Mohawk River.
